'No True Bill' Expected In Hot McCarthy Dispute

When the time comes for the senator-judges to hand down their decision in the Army-McCarthy hearing, how will the verdict read? How will they answer the original question: Who lied? Ray Tucker, who writes the Washington column, "National Whirligig," for this newspaper each day, gives his opinion in his column today.

Briefly, Tucker says, there will be no verdict. Instead, says this veteran Capitol Hill correspondent, the committee's Republican majority will hand down the "great McCarthy compromise." Why? Tucker believes that the senators "would be committing party and personal suicide if they returned a true bill against eith-

'No True Bill' Expected In Hot McCarthy Dispute

When the time comes for the senator-judges to hand down their decision in the Army-McCarthy hearing, how will the verdict read? How will they answer the original question: Who lied?

Ray Tucker, who writes the Washington column, "National Whirligig," for this newspaper each day, gives his opinion in his column today.

Briefly, Tucker says, there will be no verdict. Instead, says this veteran Capitol Hill correspondent, the committee's Republican majority will hand down the "great McCarthy compromise." Why? Tucker believes that the senators "would be committing party and personal suicide if they returned a true bill against either party in the dispute."

Sign Of Berlin Recovery Noted; .Cigarette Butts Lying Around

BERLIN (A)-There are cigarette butts on the streets of Berlin, the city with the split per-

There are thousands of window flower boxes blooming in

To me there are more significant testimonials to the postwar recovery of the German capital, still the fulcrum of the East-West tug-of-war, than the sight of workmen raising tall scaffolding to repair damaged buildings.

In 1946 if a visitor flicked away a half-smoked cigarette, five hands grabbed for it before it hit the pavement. The collection of cigarette butts was a leading industry. Tobacco, coffee and sugar often took the place of money as a medium of exchange and a measure of value.

Even bankers tilled backyard gardens because food was so scarce, and few found time or energy to raise flowers. The window boxes were barren of bloom.

The third most important sign of recovery is the disappearance of the look of fear and fawning from the eyes of the people who live here. In 1946 the typical Berlin look was that of a castaway animal, a homeless expression of cautious pleading that seeks friendship from a stranger. That look is gone altogether.

These signals of human recovery and a return to human dignity and self-confidence are far more impressive than Berlin's property recovery, the almost miraculous speed with which it is restoring its battered physical structure.

No city its size in history ever took a more fearsome battering. Allied airplanes rained 75,000 tons of bombs on it. Russian artillery methodically shelled it for weeks in a calculated effort to reduce it to complete ruin.

TO WITHIN 1/4 OZ. OF ACCURACY As a result the city lost 500,000 lives, 38 per cent of the buildings in its 340 square mile area were destroyed, and an additional 38 per cent were damaged. The debris has been tidied up but engineers recently estimated 100 million tons of rubble still remain.

But the streets are thronged, new shops stocked with food, clothing or luxury goods open regularly, and the squabbling gathering of black market operators are gone.

The Allied - occupied Western sectors and the Russian - held Eastern sector are neculiarly difly symbolized Berlin's property revival with a concentrated show window reconstruction of Stalin Allee. Big yellow-tiled apartment buildings and street shops, Russian in design and as impersonal as sardines in a can, line that thoroughfare for miles. But step one block away and you are back in uncleared debris. West Berlin has no single reconstruction job to equal this but has spread a vaster building revival program throughout the entire sector.

The difference in the human rehabilitation factor is clear to people in the Western sector are better dressed, the shops hold more goods, the streets are better kept up than those in the Russian sector.

The problem of unemployment is greater in the Allied sector, of course, the chief reason being that 305,737 refugees poured aeross from the East in 1953, some 37,410 more in the first four months of this year.

Whether they come in quest of food or the political and spiritual nourishment of a freer world, they do come. Despite this flood of refugees, the Western sector authorities have cut their total of unemployed from 300,000 to 197, 000. Each year West Berlin is living more on its own efforts, less on the cuff of help from the Allies and the Federal German Re-

The sector remains as a redoubt island surrounded by a Red tide of Communism. But the air of hopelessness is gone, and nobody is busy pushing the panic button. People want to fix up their homes, open new businesses, grow flowers again in their window boxes. They pick their cigarettes from a packet instead of a pavement.

As one German told me:

"Anything can still happen, of course, but at least we feel our | 550, the "Korean G.I. Bill." allies won't just ride up to the airport one morning and fly away and leave us to the Russians.'

Already in office longer than any other Ohio governor, Lausche has gained a reputation as one of the state's most astute vote-getters. His independence of the Democratic state organization has irked party regulars. But he was the only elective Democratic statehouse official to survive the 1952 Eisenhower Republican landslide.

Lausche customarily starts his official election campaigning late, but friends assert that he never really stops. Between state business he sandwiches appearances at various public and private functions and a few rounds of golf.

Skirting comment on golf, the governor reviewed his busy schedule to show why he didn't know when he could get around to campaigning.
